

Protect Women & Children

SEXUALISATION OF CHILDREN

Under the Irish Constitution, Education Act 1998 and Children First Act 2015 teachers and educators must protect children. Exposing a child to sexually inappropriate material counts as abuse.

Books containing explicit sexual content are now widely available to children aged 12 to 18 in schools and libraries and in some libraries to children under-12 (this used to be considered grooming). The 'Pride Reading Guide' recommended by transgender organisations and the National Council for Curriculum and Assessment (NCAA) includes books such as This Book is Gay which contains graphic descriptions of 'blow jobs', 'hand jobs' and 'fisting', describes the pleasure of anal stimulation and says that porn (and multiple partners) is fun. Following complaints some libraries moved these books to the adult section, but some libraries refused to.

Some people now claim that sex with children is OK as long as the child consents, there is even a TED talk (this is rape). Isle of Man parents were shocked that their 9-year-olds were traumatised by a blow-by-blow description of a sex-change operation and told that there are 72 genders.

Pride parades once an entertaining family friendly celebration have become increasingly sexualised. In 2022 a participant in Waterford flashed little children in the crowd (this is a criminal offence), in Tipperary little children were given penis-shaped lollipops and at other parades people dressed for and simulated S&M and bondage. This is grooming/paedophilia. This extremism has resulted in some people leaving LGBTQI+; as they are genuinely concerned for children's well-being.

GENDER RECOGNITION ACT 2015

In Ireland prior to 2015, it was necessary to undergo psychological and medical intervention to get a Gender Recognition Certificate; this was quietly changed in 2015 and now one simply has to declare one's intention to live as the opposite gender, it can be done online, and one is legally of a different gender, no hormones, no operations. One can then play ladies Gaelic football (taking places from women/girls), use ladies dressing rooms (those who do not wish to share intimate spaces with males will leave) and go to a womens prison (Limerick womens prison currently houses three trans-identified men all imprisoned for violent crimes).

WOMEN CANCELLED

Irish women were not consulted when the legal definition of woman was expanded; and official state funded feminist organisations failed to protect them. Government Policy now prioritises trans-identifying males' rights at the expense of women's rights. Transgender Equality Network Ireland (TENI) and the National Women's Council (NWC) have called for those who "defend biology" to be censored.

SAFE FEMALE SPACES

Female only facilities protect women's safety, privacy and dignity and exist because 99% of sex offenders are male and 80% of victims are female. Biological males using them effectively makes them unsafe (more sexual assaults in mixed-sex facilities). Biological males commit more crimes even after sex re-assignment surgery.

Irish women should not be ashamed or afraid to say what we are – Adult Human Females

EXTREME TRANSGENDER IDEOLOGY is now being promoted in schools and in society. Vulnerable teenagers struggling with the hormonal changes of puberty and a lack of self-confidence are encouraged to think their problems are as a result of being in the “wrong” body and encouraged to explore gender reassignment, with no proper counselling, no mention of side effects or long-term consequences. In a recent podcast, a 24-year-old Irish Lesbian woman told of her experiences with Belong To which she joined at age 14, and which encouraged children to change gender. She was bullied and called transphobic for not wanting a sexual relationship with a male lesbian

THE GENDER RECOGNITION BILL 2023 currently going through the Dáil, will allow children aged 16 and 17 to change their gender and receive surgery abroad, without parental consent.

INAPPROPRIATE TREATMENT OF GENDER DYSPHORIA

Professor Donal O'Shea, a leading clinician at the National Gender Service, stated that teenagers are too young to make life changing decisions which could lead to irreversible surgery and highlighted the increasing number of patients who regret gender transition surgery. He suggested that activist groups such as TENI and Belong To are 'brainwashing' politicians and HSE management to go against the advice of expert clinicians.

While there is a very small percentage of people who genuinely have gender dysphoria and for whom the physical trauma of cutting off body parts, becoming infertile (from hormone treatment) and suffering the side effects of constant medication, is worth it, it is a huge decision and no physically irreversible decisions should be taken before becoming an adult or without proper therapy. Clinicians say that many children are simply going through a transient phase and social contagion is thought to be a factor contributing to the large increase in numbers.

Psychotherapist Stella O'Malley (Newstalk, 2022) has said that some clinicians are too quick to offer children medicalised solutions.

Due to the Cass report on the controversial Tavistock clinic the NHS now warn against inappropriate social transitioning, such as changing names/pronouns (considered a psychological intervention), puberty blockers and hormones.

SCHOOLS

If children are taught to be kind and accepting of differences, they will grow up to be inclusive and won't need to be taught to include specific minorities. Imposing transgender ideology and teaching it to children as fact, sows seeds of doubt in young developing minds, not yet mature enough to process such information, creating children who are not comfortable in their own skin. HSE booklet Busy Bodies states that 'Gender Identity is how we think of ourselves as a boy, a girl, neither or both.' another example of transgender ideology being presented as fact, before consultation on its inclusion in the primary curriculum.

RSE/SPHE Curriculum and Transgender Ideology in Schools

New school curricula are being prepared at present and Minister Roderic O'Gorman has stated that 'transgender issues' will be part of this for primary and secondary schools. BUT Schools must comply with the Education Act 1998, which protects a student's right not to attend instruction that goes against the parents' conscience. This is also in accordance with the Irish Constitution, which guarantees the rights of parents as the primary educator. The Department of Education and Skills cannot override these constitutional rights.

Primary

The Catholic Primary Schools Management Association (CPSMA) and the Irish Muslim Council and thousands of parents informed the NCAA and Ministers Roderick O'Gorman and Norma Foley that they object to the introduction of transgender ideology into primary schools. Leo Varadkar, Micheál Martin and Michael D Higgins all showing complete disregard for their concerns intend to steamroll this agenda into the Curriculum.

In 2021 The Irish National Teachers' Organisation (INTO), LGBT group produced a an utterly inappropriate cartoon video showing a primary school teacher enabling the gender transition of a very young child, and presenting as fact that 'a girl can become a boy' and 'a boy can become a girl'.

Secondary

The new Junior Cycle SPHE/RSE (September 2023) is full of transgender ideas and terminology and will teach children to question their gender, stating for example that children have a 'sex assigned to them at birth', insinuating that parents decide their child's sex rather than it being a biological fact. Teaching children to uncritically accept a system of beliefs as fact is indoctrination.

The Senior Cycle SPHE" draft curriculum (September 2024) is also concerning. Parents have a right to opt out but find that schools make it very difficult, making them collect their children for the duration of RSE lessons for example.

The Undue Influence of Transgender NGOs on Policy

Transgender NGOs such as TENI and Belong To, who receive huge government funding, (from our taxes) lobby the government for 'hormone blockers and surgery, to be made readily available and push gender ideology. The considerable influence that these groups have over government, the HSE, teacher groups and youth groups is extremely concerning; Roderick O'Gorman transferred €1.1 million allocated for Magdalene Laundry victims and Traveller groups to LGBTQI+ projects. Anyone who dares to question the agenda is called homophobic, transphobic or 'far-right'. This makes it difficult for those with a genuine concern for children's welfare to speak out.

What Can You Do. As a parent/teacher educate yourself on what is happening and its potential consequences. Make your objections known.

Act Now to Protect Yourself Your Children & Grandchildren
If Not Now When, If Not You Who

More info, helpful draft letters etc

The Teachers Education Alliance
<https://irisheducationalliance.com>
<https://youtu.be/thcj0HyDNo8>

The Countess (doctors, lawyers, writers, students, 15,000 followers)
<https://thecountess.ie>